

Public Health Sciences

The department of public health sciences offers a Master of Arts in aging studies. A graduate certificate in public health is available for degree and nondegree seeking individuals whose primary goal is core public health training.

For the most current information or further questions, please refer to the public health sciences department website (<http://wichita.edu/phs>).

Degree Programs in Public Health Sciences

The School of Health Sciences, department of public health sciences offers the following degree programs:

- Master of Arts in Aging Studies (<http://catalog.wichita.edu/graduate/health-professions/health-sciences/public-health-sciences/ma-in-aging-studies-age>)
- Graduate Emphasis in Aging Studies (<http://catalog.wichita.edu/graduate/health-professions/health-sciences/public-health-sciences/graduate-emphasis-in-aging-studies>)

Nondegree Programs in Public Health Sciences

- Administrator-in-Training (AIT) Practicum Placement (<http://catalog.wichita.edu/graduate/health-professions/health-sciences/public-health-sciences/administrator-training-ait-practicum-placement-program>)
- Graduate Certificate in Health Administration (<http://catalog.wichita.edu/graduate/health-professions/health-sciences/public-health-sciences/grad-certificate-in-ha>)
- Graduate Certificate in Public Health (<http://catalog.wichita.edu/graduate/health-professions/health-sciences/public-health-sciences/graduate-certificate-public-health-program>)

Courses in Public Health Sciences

- Aging Studies (AGE) (<http://catalog.wichita.edu/graduate/courses/age>)
- Public Health Sciences (PHS) (<http://catalog.wichita.edu/graduate/courses/phs>)