Applied Learning

Students in the FM in women's, ethnicity and intersectional studies are required to complete an applied learning or research experience to graduate from the program. The requirement can be met by taking WOMS 190, WOMS 287, WOMS 387 or WOMS 587. All of these courses encourage students to make presentations (paper, poster or skit) at the Diverse Women's Summit (DWS), the Global Village Assembly (GVA), or at another university-based, state or national conference. These courses require students to produce a final research paper or research project that reflects developed knowledge and critical thinking within the major.
